“ I could write a book with all of our memories, with you around there was never a dull moment. It breaks my heart you had to go so soon and just so happened to be not even a week and a half before our little girls 5th birthday💔 this isn't fair at all I should be getting a text saying to tell Kamiyah happy birthday and I will see her later but instead we have to attend your funeral the very next day.. I really hope your at peace and have nothing but pure happiness, just know I will forever remind Kamiyah of who you are and how much you loved her. I will always protect her but you do me a favor and watch over us from up above. We love you forever.

“ There seems to be too many memories racing through my brain, making it difficult to share just one in particular. However, I will say, that our friendship and your presence in my life imprinted more on me than just memories. In fact, you were undeniably blessed in regard of how powerful your presence was. I always knew when you were around, even if I hadn't seen you before that point, and I always wanted to be around you, and enjoyed our times together, whether these were times of solace and well-being or times of trials and tribulations. Just having you around was suffice for me, because I was just as confident in our ability to have fun together as I was in our ability of facing the world together if need be. Although you were younger than me, you were always teaching me something. I could learn something every day from you and interestingly enough, you taught me a lot about myself that I was unaware of until I noticed it in you. I saw a lot of myself in you, and I don't think you ever understood what I meant when I said that, nor the immense positive impact it had on me and the growth I've experienced. For this, I can not in any manner, express my eternal gratitude. In writing these few sentences, I've come to the heart breaking realization that I only have the memories of you. There are no more to be made, and I'll never see you again. However this is something I can't seem to accept as truth at this point. I'm clinging to the hope that it has something to do with that strong presence I mentioned. Hopefully it's that same presence that's with me still, even as I write this, that I feel is the reason behind my disbelief of your departure. I'm hoping that very presence never leaves me or any of your other loved ones, during the remainder of our time in this world. To say you'll be missed is an understatement, so I will instead proceed to conclude by instead saying YOU WERE LOVED, AND STILL ARE. I'll never forget you bro, and I won't let anyone else either. Blessed to call you my friend, and forever have you not only in my memories, but in my heart and spirit as well.

“ You are my favorite memory Gage, I'm so grateful to have had you in my life. You always had my back no matter what. Anytime I needed you, you were there. My cousin but I loved you like my brother I'll never forget you and all the moments we shared. You always put a smile on my face I'm going to miss you more then words could describe. You were truly the definition of a rider I don't know how we will all continue life without you. It will never be the same.

“ Only knew Gage for just a short time. He became a great friend to me very quickly and I would say my best memory will be all the times we talked about our lives and the ones we loved. He will be remembered by me mostly because he was one of the best riders on any kind of motorcycle and could fix any of them. He had a great smile and a great heart. I miss him dearly and he will never be forgotten. RIP my friend.
