“ So many memories of my youth could I share. As a young boy, having Uncle Jess come in to eat dinner would produce a big smiling face and the admonition "you better eat all those beans and taters, or you'll never be strong like this" as he would bend his arm, and we would watch in disbelief how big his muscle would pop up. And we wanted to be just like Uncle Jess. Then as a young man I came to live, not just visit, Mamaw and Uncle Rob at the farm and many days I stood beside Uncle Jess and learned how being good natured about Hard Work, could give you character and strength, not just in your body, but in your soul. Those are my precious memories I will never forget. During the past 25 years I have had a hole in my heart missing the moments to add to those memories. As I have driven slowly down Owl Hole Gap Road and watched as he drove up the hill past the house, I yearned for a second to hug and give my love to man who loved me then, enough to want me to work hard and be strong...Uncle Jess, rest a while now...and know you helped teach me to be happy and strong with God giving strength, and before you know it, I'll be there to give you that hug. ...Ricky

“ I remember Uncle Jesse as a kind, soft spoken (big man) always with a smile on his face and good humored. He and Gladys were always so friendly when we would get the chance to visit or when we were over at Mamaw Morgans for Sunday lunch. At least I got to visit a little before he passed and he will be surely missed but God is getting a special man.
